

2015 Golden George Awards: Americans Living the Christmas Spirit Year Around (Apply Main Street)

At the end of the year we always see People of the Year lists and publications, and awards. I have a slightly different take that keeps with the theme of the season, and also gets released a bit earlier. I also feel my list goes beyond the whos who of the newsmakers from the year. The Golden George Awards is something I announce every year on my podcast. This is the first year to have them officially published. The idea is to look for stories and individuals who best display the spirit of Christmas all year around. They range from regular people, to businesses, various groups and causes, to celebs, and sports stars. The name Golden George is inspired by our favorite lovable holiday hero, George Bailey played by Jimmy Stewart in It's A Wonderful Life. To me George Bailey exemplifies the type of people I look for to put on this list. There's also a negative side of the coin, the Potter Awards, reserved for those special nabobs who don't live out the Christmas spirit and make us all look bad. It's my vision that this becomes a big annual thing that people look forward to making part of the Christmastime and New Years celebrations.
